It is said that Germany's next real move will be not against Paris, but the English channel ports, using Antwerp as a basis. If they can once break through the lines, a part of the plan is to lay waste the northern part of France.

One of the light blue German aeroplanes which have been nicknamed the "still doves" approached Paris between 8 and 9 a. m. Friday. It was sighted by a French war sentinel, who gave chase. The German alrship disappeared to the north.

Col. Henry Watterson, is expected soon to call on President Wilson at the White House. It was in commenting on the visit of Col. George Harvey, formerly his enemy, that the president said that he hoped soon to once more enjoy the friendship of the Kentucky colonel. The breach between Col. Harvey, Col. Watterson and the president dates from the early days of Mr. Wilson's presidential campaign. It came after the president announced to Col. Harvey at a gathering at the Manhattan club that he was convinced that he would be far better off without the support of Harper's Weekly, of which Col. Harvey at that time was the editor. It was through his friendship for Col. Harvey that Col. Watterson withdrew his support of the

GENUINE CASE REPORTED

Negro Man Afflicted With Trypanosomiasis or Sleep Disease.

VERY RARE MALADY.

Apparently In Good Health But Can't Stay Awake.

Chas. Ferguson, otherwise known as "Hop," is suffering with a rare sleeping disease, at his home on the corner of Fourth and Mechanic streets. His physician diagnoses the disease as trypanosomiasis, and he has been suffering from the malady for some time. At first he would become drowsy while at work to such an extent that it interfered with his work and finally his drowsiness became chronic and he sleeps practically all of the time. He can be roused by shaking, but as soon as left alone goes to sleep again. He can walk about the room, but if he stops walking at once he goes to sleep on his feet. His temperature and pulse are normal and he does not appear to be ill, aside from his sleepiness. Several physicians of the city have been to see him and are observing the case closely. It is the only one ever reported here, at least in recent years.

Ferguson is about 45 years of age and has a family.

NAME GIVEN AS ZUBER ORGAN

The Second Suspect In Renshaw Case Taken To Bowling Green.

Fearing mob violence to Zuber Organ at Hopkinsville, Judge J. T. Hanbery, of Christian county, last night issued an order to the sheriff of that county to remove the prisoner to the Warren county jail for safe keeping. In accordance with this order Organ was brought to Bowling Green at an early hour this morning and placed behind the bars by Deputy Sheriff Johnson, of Hopkinsville.

Organ was arrested Saturday night on suspicion of having recently assassinated former Sheriff Renshaw, of Christian county, who was shot from ambush while he was riding along a public thoroughfare. The affair created great excitement and indignation, as the victim was a most popular man.

Organ is a negro eighteen years of age. When seen at the jail Friday morning he appeared in a sullen mood and was non-communicative. He refused to say anything about the crime of which he is suspected.—Bowling Green News.

TUBERCULOSIS

Causes Death of Farmer After Long Illness.

Frank D. Hancock, a farmer who resided about two miles northeast of the city, died last Friday, after an illness of eighteen months of tuberculosis. He was 68 years old and a native of Muhlenberg county, but moved to Christian about three or four years ago. Mr. Hancock was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church. His wife and five children survive. His funeral services were conducted at his late residence Saturday morning by Rev. J. B. Eshman and the interment took place in Riverside Cemetery.

POSITIONS HELD BY ALLIED ARMIES

Attempt By German Cavalry to Envelop French Left Wing Fails, According to Statement By Paris War Office.

OTHER ATTACKS ALSO ARE REPULSED.

Refugees From Antwerp Are Crowding Holland And Two Thousand Soldiers Have Been Interned—Refugees Invited To Return.

London, Oct. 12.—With the conclusion of that phase of the war of the nations which came with the fall of Antwerp, the censorship again has drawn a veil over the fighting in the greater part of the European continent.

The French communication deals with the series of battles which has been in progress for four weeks from east to west in France with an ever extending line which now reaches northward from the elbow at Noyon to and across the Belgian border at Armentieres.

The statement says that the allies have held their positions everywhere and that German cavalry which was attempting to envelope the allies' left wing and had seized points of passage on the Lys, east of Aire, was defeated Saturday and retired north east into the Armentieres district.

Two German aeroplanes, which seem to choose Sundays for their visits, flew over the French capital Sunday. They dropped a score of bombs, which killed three persons and wounded twenty, but did no material damage.

Part of the Antwerp garrison and 2,000 of the British naval volunteers, who crossed into Holland and laid down their arms, have been interned and will have to remain there until the end of the war. Some of the Germans also unwittingly crossed the frontier and were treated similarly.

Of refugees there appear to be no end. The Dutch towns are crowded with people who left their homes in Belgium. Hollanders are finding difficulty in providing for them. The Germans, however, have invited the refugees to return to their own country, promising them fair treatment.

England also continues to be a place of refuge for many fugitives, wounded officers and men, who are crossing from Ostend on the regular steamers.

In Antwerp everything is quiet after days of turmoil. The Germans, who arranged with the burgomaster for the surrender of the town, all the military authorities having left, have issued a warning to the people that any disturbances or attacks on Germans will be severely dealt with. So far as can be ascertained the damage done to Antwerp by the bombardment was not so serious as at first feared. The cathedral, art gallery, museum and other public buildings are in the northwest part of the city along the Scheldt where the shells did not fall. The Germans used lighter guns after they had battered down the forts with heavy guns, and naturally the former did not do so much execution.

SUNDAY'S WAR NEWS.

Belgium.

Antwerp and the forts surrounding the city, after having been subjected to violent bombardment for ten days, are now in complete possession of the Germans, but the greater part of the Belgian army has escaped. The fall of the most powerful fortress in the world is evidence, says military experts, that forts are no match for the colossal howitzers which the invaders have successfully employed against every fortified place that stood in their way. The Germans entered the town through the suburb of Berchem. The official admission was made that British troops aided in the defense of Antwerp. The death roll in the ranks of both the defenders and the invaders is said to be very

France.

Saber and lance came into play many times on the French battlefield. The town of Albert is in ruins and Roye has been swept away in the attempt of the Germans to break through the allied lines. Infantrymen engaged in close fighting around Arras. The French made considerable advance in Alsace and captured some territory on the heights of the Meuse.

Austria.

The advance of the Austrians has forced the Russians to slacken their attack on Przemyśl, says a Vienna dispatch, which also reports enormous losses of the Czar's forces suffered during the attack on the fortress. The Russians are said to have evacuated Rzeszow, and to be in full flight in their retreat from Maramaros-Azizet in the Carpathians.

Russia.

The German troops are retiring from Lyek and blowing up all bridges behind them, according to Petrograd advices from East Prussia. Furious artillery battles are reported in two passes which approach the Vistula. Owing to the heavy German forces thrown into Galicia the Russian plan of campaign has been changed, and all movements are being kept secret.

Germany.

German re-enforcements are being rushed to the Russian front not only by train, but by sea from Stettin, Stralsund, Danzig and other available Baltic ports. In Berlin the fall of Antwerp has caused great rejoicing and the general opinion is, it is stated, that the surrender of this city marks the beginning of the end in favor of German arms.

Eighteen Million Men.

A military expert estimates the following as the present fighting strength of the nations at war:

Russia	6,000,000
Germany	4,800,000
France	4,000,000
Austria	2,400,000
England	250,000
Servia	300,000
Montenegro	80,000

Total 17,930,000

He estimates the losses in killed, wounded, missing and prisoners so far as follows for the four principal armies:

Germany	1,000,000
France	300,000
Austria	500,000
Russia	250,000

Total 2,050,000

Uncle Sam's Ultimatum.

No move will be made by the United States in Mexico nor will the Government be given formal recognition until Carranza guarantees to give protection to all aliens and Mexicans, regardless of their past affiliations.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT SUSPENDED.

Washington, Oct. 11.—Suspension of weekly weather forecasts was announced today by the weather bureau, owing to the interruption of cable reports from Europe and Asiatic ports because of the war in Europe. Interruption of cable service to Alaska has further complicated the bureau's task. It is stated that predictions will be made only for periods of thirty-six and forty-eight

NEW CARON DIRECTORY

Is Being Delivered to Subscribers In The City This Week.

IMPROVED OVER FORMER ONE

Interesting Facts Taken From The Prospectus—Book Sold For $3.

The agent of the Caron Directory Co., of Louisville, has arrived here and will begin the distribution to subscribers of the third volume of this Company's Directory. The book has a neat appearance with an improved cloth bound cover and the back bone embossed buckram. The typographical work is of the very best.

As usual it has four directories bound in one volume—namely, the City Government and city and county record of all public institutions and other matters; then the general or alphabetical list of all the grown inhabitants; next the street guide of householders and those engaged in business, and last the classified list of all professions, manufacturers, trades and pursuits in the city.

The Caron Directory in its introductory says:

We take pleasure in placing before the public our third volume of the Hopkinsville City Directory.

The population of Hopkinsville, according to the census taken by our canvassers, is as follows:

White	6,271
Colored	4,397

Total 10,668

This is an increase of 490 over the census of 1912 taken by our firm.

Hopkinsville has made wonderful strides in the way of public improvements since our last issue.

There are at present several handsome business houses under construction, which will mean an expenditure of $100,000.

It is contemplated that in the near future, a modern theatre will be constructed. Also a new public school building.

Recently over a mile of bitulithic streets has been constructed, and during the next year it is estimated that several miles of street will be built either of bitulithic, brick or wooden blocks.

There has been established the John C. Latham Memorial Parks, known as Virginia Park and Peace Park. These parks are in the heart of the city, and are along the first lines of a "City Beautiful."

Dr. E. S. Stuart has recently, as a memorial to his wife, built a modern hospital (known as the Jennie Stuart Memorial Hospital), at a cost of $60,000. This building is complete in every respect and a credit to a city of many times the population of Hopkinsville.

The Government is at work and will have completed by January 1, 1915, a handsome Government building, which will be used as a post-office. This building is of Bowling Green stone, and is modern in every respect, and it represents an expenditure of $125,000.

There will be opened about October 1st, of this year, a Carnegie Public Library, which is beautifully located on Liberty and Eighth, the approximate cost being $15,000. The Mogul Wagon Works Company has recently enlarged their plant at an expense of about $15,000.

The Pennyroyal building, which is now under construction, will be an up-to-date and modern apartment house. The excellent location and the modern conveniences will make this an ideal home in which to live. The cost of this building is $60,000.

As a loose leaf tobacco market, Hopkinsville leads the world. Over the loose leaf floors during the year of 1913-14 31,000,000 pounds of tobacco was handled. The average price paid per pound was 8 cents.

As an agriculture center Hopkinsville and Christian county

CONVENTION ADJOURNS

Meeting of Kentucky Universalists at Consolation Church Closed Sunday.

OFFICERS WERE ELECTED

Rain Interferes With Business, But 700 People Heard Sunday Sermon.

The Kentucky Universalist Convention held at Consolation church, practically closed its business session Saturday afternoon. Rev. Elton Wilson, of Canon, Ga., editor of the Universalist Herald, preached a splendid sermon Sunday to an appreciative audience.

The crowd on Sunday was estimated to be about seven hundred. The sermon was well cared for.

A memorial service was held Saturday afternoon in memory of members of the church who passed away during the year.

This was followed by the pastoral service. The rain interfered materially with the business session on Friday and Saturday morning.

The beautiful weather on Sunday made that a great day for the universalist people of Kentucky.

Officers were elected as to Geo. M. Clark, Hopkinsville, president; L. Franklin, Clarksville, vice-president; Charles M. Johnson, Louisville, secretary; Mrs. C. A. Crofton, Crofton, treasurer; A. A. Crofton, trustee for three years.

STITES HOMESTEAD

Bought of C. R. Bouldin By Nick Lacy, of North Christian.

Mr. C. R. Bouldin has sold his suburban house on North Main street, just beyond the city limits, to Nick Lacy, who recently moved to town from the Bluff Springs district. The place is the old Stites homestead and is a fine old mansion of many rooms, back from the road in a lawn set in trees and surrounded by five acres of ground. The price is private.

The farmers raised 1,500,000 bushels of wheat. This is about one-tenth of the total wheat crop of Kentucky. Tobacco, wheat, corn, barley, oats and alfalfa are among the chief products grown in this county.

A new creamery recently has been established at a cost of $30,000.

The Western Kentucky Asylum for the Insane, which is located just outside the city limits, has recently spent $40,000 on improvements.

There has been built during the past two years about seventy-five residences, at a cost of from $2,000 to $25,000 each. There is under construction at present over thirty residences, and plans are being drawn for several other handsome homes.

The Hopkinsville Business Men's Association is now a permanent organization. Through their efforts of the past two years they have accomplished wonders in this community. They are at present promoting a street car and interurban line, which promises to become a reality.

Of an original issue of about $115,000 bonded R. R. indebtedness the city has in the past six years eliminated this amount.

The value of property, real and personal, in Hopkinsville in 1912, was $6,600,000. In 1914 it was $6,400,000, showing an increase of $800,000.

The postoffice receipts to June 31, 1914, were $29,484.22, an increase of $3,078.54 over 1913.

The publishers wish to thank the business men and the citizens for the generous support and assistance given them in this, their third, year of publication.

Democratic prospects in Tennessee seem to be improving every day.Secretary of State Bryan will make several speeches in Tennessee this week. He will be at Nashville Friday.After all, the dear ones are to help pay the war taxes. The revised bill puts a tax on chewing gum and perfume.An American writing from London, describes it as "the large city it has ever been my pleasure to visit." We take it he is just beginning his journey.—Banner.According to reports received at the vatican more than 65,000 ecclesiastics are now serving in different capacities with the armies in the field, especially with the Belgian, French and Austrian forces. Most of these clergymen are engaged in hospital work. They include seven bishops and nineteen other prelates.Belgian refugees are fleeing into Holland at the rate of 5,000 a day.
Holland is prepared to resist a violation of her neutrality by the Germans. An army of 450,000 Dutch troops is mobilized along the frontier and reservists are steadily returning to Holland from the United States, 1,500 already having left New York.Business conditions throughout the country are improving, according to reports reaching President Wilson, and democratic speakers are to be instructed to dwell on this fact during the fall campaign in answer to the expected charges by republicans and progressives that the new tariff has brought financial disaster. The President is informed that many orders for American goods are being received from abroad and that the first bad effects of the European war on American industry have passed.

There was no excuse for England to leave Belgium to fight its own battles and the brave little army to be driven from city to city by an overwhelming force of Germans, without at least some outside help.
England's tardiness in putting armies into action is sure to prolong the war and there is a suspicion that she does not want peace to come too soon. If Germany and France exhaust their resources and England discreetly conserves hers, when peace finally comes her superiority will be manifest in the work of rehabilitation. England's failure to help the brave little Belgians defend their last fortified city would be almost criminal if it were not so pathetic. Up to now the Belgians, in no way concerned in the war, have borne the brunt of the conflict and their country has been overrun and impooverished. It is less than 50 miles from England to Belgium and yet England with 1,000,000 men at her disposal has sent none to aid her heroic little ally. The fall of Antwerp will release another German army of 100,000 men to be sent as re-inforcements to Von Kluck. The failure to aid the Belgians is either a show of weakness or a display of indifference to the fate of a helpless nation about to disappear temporarily

QUEER OLD TAXES

Beards, Windows and Hats Had to Pay Tribute.Needy Kings in Ancient Times Were Very Unorthodox in Their Methods of Raising Money—Sollicited Like Beggars.In early times it was common for needy kings to raise money by very unorthodox methods in England. Edward I was accustomed to help himself to anything of value, and Edward III had a disturbing habit of imposing taxes without the consent of parliament.Edward IV solicited money "like a common, or rather a sturdy, beggar."Richard II imposed a poll tax which affected both males and females from sixteen years upward. An earl had to pay four pounds, as also had the mayor of London, while a married man had to pay fourpence for himself and his wife and a single woman had to pay just as much. No wonder, remarks the New York Press, this tax led to Wat Tyler's rebellion.Charles I was a keen man for money and he set parliament at defiance. One of his most remarkable proclamations ordered the nobility and gentry to retire to their country seats and cease idling their time in London, under penalty of a heavy fine.We grumble nowadays at the taxes imposed by the various budgets, but we are freed of the freak taxes that burdened our forefathers.Beards were taxed at one time and Henry VIII, who wore one himself free of charge, graded the tax according to the status of the wearer. The archbishop of Canterbury had to pay three shillings fourpence for his face, and this was the amount fixed by Elizabeth on every beard of over a fortnight's growth.The most odious tax ever introduced was that of the birth tax, which came into operation in 1695. This tax ranged from £30 on the birth of a child to a duke to two shillings for a workingman's child. Taxes were also imposed on burials and marriages.William Pitt the younger, who was the most juvenile premier and chancellor of the exchequer Britain ever had, came into office at the age of twenty-four, and as he found the public finances in a desperate state, he instituted some weird taxes. He placed a tax on windows and a tax on horses.
In defiance of the latter tax and by way of drawing ridicule upon it, a man named Jonathan Thatcher rode his cow to and from the Stockport market.So recently as 1869 there was a tax in England on hair powder, which was first instituted in 1795. It cost a guinea a year for a license to display powdered hair, though a striving parent with more than two unmarried daughters could obtain a double license for two guineas, which allowed all the girls of the family to powder their polls.This tax was not so stupid as the flat tax, which was introduced in the reign of George III, when money was badly required to fight the French. For a year there was a tax on watches and clocks, and women will be interested to learn that from 1695 to 1706 there was a tax on bachelors.Every unwedded man over twenty-five had to pay into the treasury a shilling a year, though in the case of a gentleman this amount was increased to five shillings, and in the case of a duke £12-10.This tax was not so stupid as the flat tax, which was introduced in the reign of George III, when money was badly required to fight the French. For a year there was a tax on watches and
to learn that from 1695 to 1706 there

WISE WALL STREET BROKER

He Made His Manager His Partner
With the Object of Cutting Down His Losses."How can you look so smug and cheerful?" one broker disagreeably asked another. "You certainly can't be making money while the stock exchange is closed.""I'm not," said the other, "but I'm losing less than when the exchange was open. Staying in the country has made it unnecessary for me to buy a commutation ticket to town, and by remaining at home I don't have to buy my lunch every day.
Further, I'm saving on stamps, stationery and telegrams.""And this morning I served notice on my manager and customers' man that they could become partners in the business, at a certain percentage each, or quit. They came in, and now they can share with me the loss of the business. I don't have to pay them salaries; whatever they draw, they will have to pay back again out of their share of the profits—if we ever make profits again."

Law Point Settled.

The court of appeals of New York in Severson, as commissioner of charities of Binghamton vs. Macomber, holds that when the bondman for one held as a disorderly person for failing to support his family is sued, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove that the family had become a public charge. The court said that the judgment of conviction and the bond executed by the defendant were founded on the man's ability to support his wife, and the judgment necessarily established that he was liable and able to support her at the time the judg-

PRESERVE OLD SONG

Star-Spangled Banner Is Sacred, Says G. A. R. Head.Washington Gardner, Commander-in-Chief, Makes Plea That It Be Kept Honored by All as American National Anthem.Detroit.—A plea for the perpetuation of "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the American anthem, without alloy, was made recently by Washington Gardner, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, in his address before the forty-eighth national encampment of that organization here.He urged the old soldiers to join in a movement to pay special honor to this song, and to discountenance the practice of playing it in medley with such "flippant and comparatively meaningless ditties" as "Yankee Doodle" and "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home."He said there was something inspiring in an audience rising and standing uncovered at the majestic strains of the national anthem, but it was "incongruous, bordering even on the ludicrous," for the band to strike up some other national air in medley with this, and to observe the audience resume sitting in "an irregular, half-ashamed manner." It were better not to rise at all when the national hymn is played in medley, he said.A recommendation that permanent headquarters for the G. A. R. be established in Washington was another point of his address. Chicago and Philadelphia had been proposed, but he preferred the national capital, and thought that if possible the necessary space should be secured in a government building where the officers could keep closely in touch with matters before congress which affected the Grand army.A standing committee of seven persons, with the commander-in-chief and adjutant general of the G. A. R. as ex-officio members, he also recommended principally for the purpose of taking charge of all legislation which had the indorsement of the order. He said that such a committee would "concentrate responsibility, reduce expense and give promise of better results."The present membership, in good standing, was reported as 171,335.
During the year the roll was curtailed
by the death of 11,187 old soldiers, but notwithstanding this large figure, it is 151 less than died during the preceding year.WAKES UP

Steals Ring From Baby.

The meanest man in the world broke into Herman J. Boecklin's house, in Kent, Westchester, county, N. Y. He stole two watches, a diamond ring, silverware, bric-a-brac, and $18 which he found under a mattress. He also took the family revolver. But to show what he was capable of he proceeded as follows: He took a piece of soap and greased fourteen-month-old Helen Boecklin's finger, slipping off her little gold ring. He cut a gold chain and locket from her neck. He smashed her toy bank and took $4.63. Lest Helen should cry, he took her out of her crib while he stole her jewelry. Then he went away, leaving her on the floor. Her cries brought neighbors, who discovered the burglary.

DARING BALKANS CIRCUS FEATURE

Marvelous Riders From the Far East Appearing in America for First Time.

MEN FOUGHT BALKAN BATTLES

When the Balkan states were in arms against Turkey and the newspapers throughout the world were devoting many columns of space to the battles being fought in the Orient, it was frequently commented upon in America that the inhabitants of the Balkan states, and their habits and characteristics, were comparatively unknown to the world at large. In fact Americans today know less about the rugged mountaineers of the Orient than they do about any other foreign race.

On Wednesday, Oct. 21, this city is to be visited by a number of these interesting Orientals, some of whom were actual participants in the recent warfare. These visitors form one of the novel features of Ringling Brothers' circus. There are four men and three women in the troupe and this is their first appearance before the public. They left their home in the Balkan mountains during the latter part of the winter to come to America to fulfill their contract with the Ringling Brothers, and this is also their first visit outside of their native land.

The Balkan troupe was discovered by Albert Hodgini, a famous European horse trainer, who visited the Balkans during the past winter to purchase blooded steeds for the Ringling Brothers' circus.

The riding feats of this troupe are as daring as they are picturesque, most of them having never before been attempted in a circus ring. Dangerous vaulting, double somersaulting, and pirouetting feats are performed by these men and women with an ease and grace that has astounded the best riders in the circus world. The act is richly costumed and the performance is accompanied with Oriental music. Another notable feature of the circus program is the massive new spectacle, Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, will be presented here with a cast of 1,250 characters and a ballet of 300 girls.—Advertisement.

How Rats Cause Fires.

The most common way in which rats cause fires, says Safety Engineering, is by gnawing away the insulating covering from wires used in electric lighting, where the wires pass under floors or inside of partitions. The insulating materials are used for nests, which rats build of combustibles in contact with naked wires.

SKELETON-CLAW BOB

To His Sorrow Burglar Thought
He Was Dealing With an Amateur Detective.

By EDGAR WHITE.

Before I had been working a month in the chaotic condition I became involved in an amusing situation. My "boss," Dan Hughes, the young man who helped me drill holes and load coal, began eyeing me covertly and seemed to be taking my measure. I laughed and made light of it, but it was not long till I was on to what was ailing him.

I slipped into his room at the boarding house one night without taking too much trouble to knock. He was undoubtedly startled, as he hastily began gathering up some papers and things, which he crowded into the drawer of the little table beside him. Quick as had been his movement, I was enabled to see the heading of one of the papers, "American Detective Journal," and when the boy observed that I had noticed it he blushed like a girl and hung his head. After that it didn't require a very discerning mind to guess that Dan had fallen a victim to the widely circulated advertisement of "Detectives wanted in every locality; send five dollars for description of parties wanted in your locality, for whom big rewards are offered, and complete outfit, including start, credentials, system of identification, etc. Write at once to Nick Carter Agency."

It wasn't very polite, but I couldn't help laughing uproariously, which made Dan's embarrassment all the greater. After awhile he decided to make a clean breast of it, but pledged me on my solemn word of honor not to tell what an easy fish he had been. He showed me his great tin star, bearing in prominent letters the legend: "Special Detective Officer, North American Private Police Association," a slung shot, a bright-looking but unserviceable revolver, a fierce set of false whiskers, brass knuckles and a dark lantern.

And this callow youth expected to trap professional burglars and highwaymen with an outfit like that!

As he went on showing the ludicrous things he became more confidential and finally pulled out his detective journal and pointed to the picture of a man who was wanted in Montreal for unloading a jewelry safe of something like $10,000 worth of diamonds and trinkets. Felix Canover, alias "Skeleton-Claw Bob," was given the honor of a dark suspicion, but the advertisement candidly admitted the authorities were in doubt.

"And at first I was fool enough to think it was you, Jack," the duped boy said, in apologetic tones; "I don't know why, unless it was because your fingers are long and slender like a woman's."

I smiled at the compliment and patted him friendly on the shoulder.

"My boy," I said, "even if you did locate Felix, or 'Skeleton-Claw Bob,' as they picturesquely describe him, it wouldn't be worth a cent to you. They only have a suspicion that he's the man; you would have to prove he did the job to get your reward, which, I fancy, would be somewhat difficult because, if he had sense enough to break into that safe, he would know too much to carry incriminating evidence about with him."

Dan mournfully admitted the truth of the observation, and then suddenly rising, he grabbed up his detective papers and paraphernalia, and before I could stay him, thrust the whole mass into the stove.

"That ends my career as a detective," he said, decidedly; "please don't tell the boys, Jack."

Of course I promised and we lighted our pipes and sat down to a game of "California Jack."

After the little episode Dan seemed to trust me more than ever, and we became even better chums than before.

Dan was very much enamored of the blonde young woman who served us at meal time, and was her dutiful cavalier whenever she wanted to go anywhere after the dishes were washed. One evening in the early summer I involuntarily heard a conversation between her and Dan on the veranda. Dan seemed to be begging her to make a date with him to the theater the next evening, when this came to my startled ears:

"You know I would go, Dannie," she said in gentle tones, "but I have promised Mr. Richards."

As Richards was no one but myself, you can't blame me for being a little interested. And I hadn't spoken a word to the girl! But now common gallantry would force me to do something. I walked over to the glass, stroked my mustache a little and smoothed my hair.

"All right, Katie," the boy was saying, "if it's old Jack, I don't care, but I'd hate to be thrown down for anyone else."

I heard Dan's footsteps as he moved out of the yard on the way to town, and surmised that Katie must be alone. The girl looked charming out there in the moonlight, with the silver rays glinting on her fluffy golden hair and lighting up her smooth, white face. She was a little startled at first, but I fancied she was not displeased at my presence. Diplomatically I led up to the subject of the approaching entertainment, and so graciously accepted my company.

"Thank you very much, Mr. Richards," she said, almost in a whisper "I'll see you tomorrow night."

With that she was gone, and I walked on air the balance of the night. Now and then Dan's pitiful, pale face seemed to look reproachfully down from the walls, but it was soon displaced by a brighter one haloed in misty golden hair, and from between two coral lips came sweeter tones than ever mounted aloft from cathedral bell:

"Thank you very much, Mr. Richards."

Resolving on a pleasant surprise for my company, I met her in the corridor the next evening as she was about to ascend to her room, preparatory to fixing up for the entertainment.

"Miss Katie," I said, "I have a little star that was bequeathed me from my aunt's estate. If you like it, it would please me to have you wear it tonight."

She clasped her small white hands in ecstasy and the blue eyes sparkled. I suggested that she accompany me to the room and see it. She colored slightly and hesitated.

"You will only be in a moment," I urged; "the door will be left open."

With evident reluctance, which caused me to admire her all the more, she followed me. Not only the diamond star, but a dozen or so other exquisite pieces were displayed in a velvet lined box before her astonished eyes.

"What a wealthy woman your aunt must have been," she murmured, as she stood before the treasure with clasped hands.

"You may take your choice—" I was saying, when the door was flung open, and Dan was in the middle of the room, with a brace of revolvers pointed at my head, beside himself with jealous rage. I knew a little about firearms, and it didn't take long to note the guns he had were an entirely different make from the one he sheepishly showed me a few nights back. I instinctively moved my right hand behind me when he said:

"Hands up, Bob! Maggie, put the jewelry on him."

Before I could say "Jack Robinson," the angel who was to accompany me to the theater had caught the nippers and fastened them securely to my wrists. I sat down to think it over. Katie—Maggie, as Dan called her—began gathering up the jewelry, and then fished around for more.

"There's enough here to fix him all right, Andy," she said, complacently; "the firm's mark's on every piece."

I looked curiously at the smooth-faced lad who was engineering the proceedings. For the first time I noted an expression in his face that seemed strange. The dark eyes gleamed with excitement, though the features were calm enough. As I studied them I observed faint lines here and there that did not belong to unsophisticated youth. I ran through my mind the multitude of police officials whom I knew personally or by reputation in this country, but could not place him.

"Dannie," I said, weakly, "would you please introduce yourself to me?"

"Certainly, Robert," he returned. "I'm Andy Beauchamp of the Canadian secret service. This lady is Mrs. Beauchamp. My dear, let me introduce you to Mr. Felix Canover, alias 'Skeleton-Claw Bob.' If there's anything else you want to know, Bob, don't be timid about asking."

BUILDER HAS HIS TROUBLES

Innumerable Complications When the Work of Constructing Chinese Dwelling Is Begun.

When a Chinaman would build a house, he consults a wizard instead of an architect. He decides the spot for the front door—for that must face exactly in the right direction—never towards the south, unless it is the house of an emperor or high official. The wizard also determines the exact size of the door, for an inch out of the way might prove fatal. There must be a screen three yards in front of the door to keep out the evil breath—no human breath, made by tobacco or liquor, or malarial vapors, but some mysterious and fatal something that no one knows much about.

Then the wizard locates the spot for the kitchen and he settles the time to begin digging, for if the earth god should be at home the workman might thrust the spade through his skull, and the family would all die.

The question must also be settled whether this is the right year to build. "There are lucky years and there are unlucky years. For instance, a man must not marry in any year beginning with an unlucky number. Having picked out a lucky year, the next thing to do is to hit upon the lucky month of the year, and then the lucky day in the month. Lucky days are yellow and unlucky days are black. There are more black days than yellow ones; so the case of the Chinese builder is not all pleasure and ease.

What She'd Like.

"I don't believe in marriage for money."

"No?"

"No. But I can't help thinking how nice it would be to happen to fall in love with a man who also happened to have a million or two."—Detroit Free Press.

Ask a Policeman.

"Pa, does money talk?"

"Yes, dear."

"All money?"

"Yes, Bobbie."

"Then how can any one get a quiet life?"—Judge.

TWO PATIENTS

At Western State Hospital
Pass Away.

Mrs. Ege-la Greer, a Warren county patient at the Western State Hospital, died Friday of engine pectoris. She was a widow, aged 45 years, and had been in the institution about a month. The remains were shipped to Glasgow.

M. M. Dougherty, a patient from Butler county, aged 72 years, died of paresis. He was received here about seven months ago. Interment in the hospital burying ground.

PEACE HERO PASSES AWAY

Bishop Tucker, After Remarkable Service in Uganda, Is Gathered to His Fathers.

Another great name, worthy to stand with those of Hannington, Pilkington and Mackay, has been added to the roll of the heroes of Uganda, in the death of Bishop Tucker, who went out in 1890 as bishop of Eastern Equatorial Africa. That vast territory has since been divided into three dioceses, of which Uganda is one. Artist and athlete before he decided to enter the church, he brought an unusual combination of qualities to his chosen lifework, and when, after several years of service in the home church, he offered himself for the foreign work he was recognized as a man of exceptional power. After 21 years of effective service he was retired for reasons of health in 1911, and since that time has been one of the canons of Durham (England) cathedral. One of the most dramatic episodes in his missionary career occurred in 1892, when Bishop Tucker had the bones of the martyr Bishop Hannington exhumed and given Christian burial outside the great thatched church of St. Paul on Namirembe hill, Uganda, and the slayer of Bishop Hannington, King M'wanga, was present as a member of the Christian congregation.

ELECTRICITY TO FIGHT FLIES

Successful Way Found to Destroy
Pests That Attack and Ruin
Rose Trees.

The latest application of electricity, according to Popular Electricity and Modern Mechanics, is that of killing the green fly by means of an electric spark. We read in this magazine:

"This fly is a species found on rose trees and is exceedingly disastrous to the flowers. Heretofore considerable difficulty has been experienced in ridding rose trees of these pests, but the electrical method recently devised is proving both practical and efficient. Briefly, the fly-killing apparatus consists of a small spark coil, spark gap, high-frequency transformer, switches and other accessories. A flexible conductor conveys the current from the high-frequency transformer to a brass-ball electrode fitted with an insulating handle so that it may be held without danger of shock. To use the apparatus the electrode is brought near the flies on the rose bushes. A spark then jumps from the electrode to the tree and kills the flies, the current passing through the tree to the ground without damage to the leaves or flowers."

He Reached His Limit.

The delightful southern gentleman of the old school, under whose insinuating tones and gracious bows the social barometer rose to summer heat, was not without his little prejudices when it came to outside barbarians. "I'll give you my notion of things," repeatedly declared a sturdy old planter of Civil war time who bestowed much of his wisdom on a contributor to Harper's Magazine. "I go first for Greenville, then for Greenville district, then for the upcountry, then for South Carolina, then for the South, then for the United States—and after that I don't go for anything. I've no use for Englishmen, Turks and Chinese."

Soon to Be Tried.

Secretary of State, C. F. Crecelius, will shortly be tried for obtaining money from the State Treasury by false pretenses. It is charged he represented to Auditor Bosworth that he had employed help at $100 per month and procured warrants for that amount, when he was only paying $25, and that thereby he obtained $75 and converted it to his own use for three months in succession.

The following from the Elizabethtown News indicates what the defense will be:

"If later information received from apparently reliable sources is to be relied upon Dr. Crecelius has not taken a cent of the State's money. He was entitled to $1,200 a year or $100 per month for stenographic work in his office. He paid this money out, according to our information, but paid it to two parties instead of one as the payroll shows. The lady who only drew $25 of the amount and was on the payroll for $100 per month was not prepared to do the work and another person was hired to do the work and to teach her and until she was taught did most of the work and received the $75 per month. There is nothing criminally wrong about this, if the statement is true. The incompetent person was given the place under a promise of Crecelius. The matter was done in a bungling way and indicates rather a lack of ability than a lack of integrity on the part of the Secretary of State. It looks like some politics is being played at Frankfort and that the Grand Jury is not free from the suspicion that it was innocently made a party to it."

Why Roquefort Is Strong.

Roquefort cheese gets its sharp flavor from caproic, caprylic and capric acids and their salts, which are formed by a sort of hydrolysis of the fat during the ripening period. This change is caused by a microbe called Penicillium roqueforti. These acids have a peppery taste.

YOUR attention is respectfully called, to an important point not generally known, that a laxative should have a tonic element to successfully meet constipation.

Mr. John B. Capers, of 610 Pecan St., Fort Worth, Texas, had a significant experience in this particular. He was afflicted with a severe case of constipation and bowel trouble. He spent a good deal of money in trying to find a remedy. To his astonishment, Peruna very quickly relieved him of his bad symptoms. This happened a number of years ago. Since then, Mr. Capers states that he has had similar attacks of trouble, the prominent symptom of which is constipation, and has always found prompt and efficient relief from Peruna. He says: "Up to the time I started using your Peruna I could drink castor oil like water. It did no good. As for salts, they were of no use. Physies of all kinds and classes were used, but we had to call on the fountain syringe for help." Peruna was able to correct this condition completely in Mr. Capers' case, and there is every reason to believe that it was the tonic qualities of Peruna, added to the laxative qualities, that procured this very desirable result.

THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER HONORED IN BALTIMORE CITY

Honor Francis Scott Key at Big Centennial.

"OLD GLORY" 100 YEARS OLD

September 12, 1814, Marked Opening of Three-Day Engagement in the War Which Gave Nation Most Stirling Anthem.

Baltimore, Md.—Baltimore opened wide her gates to guests from all over the United States when the national Star-Spangled Banner centennial was opened there for a week's duration. Sunday, September 6, was designated as patriots' day, and was featured by a music festival by a massed orchestra and a chorus of 5,000 voices. September 7 was featured as industrial day with a parade of 500 floats. The middle states regatta was rowed on that day.

Francis Scott Key day, on September 8, was observed with a floral automobile parade, a reception on battle ships in the harbor, a night carnival and tournament and colonial lawn fete. On September 10, fraternal day, a parade with 60,000 fraternal men in line, accompanied by 50 bands and 60 floats, was followed in the evening by a fraternal ball.

September 11 was celebrated as army and navy day. In the evening there was a military ball to the president, the cabinet, state governors and other distinguished guests. September 12, Star-Spangled Banner day, saw the original flag of Stars and Stripes borne through the city to Fort Mc-

Francis Scott Key.

Henry, the escort consisting of President Wilson, state governors and a picked guard of 100 men from each of the states of the union in 1814.

President Wilson addressed the guests at the dedication of Fort McHenry as a city park. But perhaps the greatest of all spectacles was the formation of a living Star-Spangled Banner by 10,000 school children, who sang the national anthem to the accompaniment of massed bands numbering 1,500 musicians. The final day was peace day, when universal peace was the theme in all Baltimore churches.

The summer of 1814 was not a bright one for the arms of the United States. On land it was marked by constant defeat, culminating in the burning of Washington August 23. But the end of that summer, nevertheless, witnessed a glorious event, celebrated in deathless verse wrung from the heart of a burning patriot, who had witnessed the night bombardment of the fortress which protected his native shores and knew not until morning whether the brave little fort had successfully withstood the assault or not.

There was no telegraph in 1814, few and sparse means of communication, but after the skirmish of August 23, sometimes called "battle" of Bladensburg, a little Maryland town, six miles from Washington, where about three thousand raw militia, mostly farmers, were quickly routed by the trained veterans of Gen. Robert Ross, the British commander, the air about Baltimore was alive with news and rumors of disaster.

The British fleet, which had left Bermuda a month before, was sailing along the Chesapeake bay and its tributary rivers, burning and destroying; Washington was in ruins, owing to a disgraceful act of vandalism perpetrated mainly through the agency of Admiral George Cockburn, who afterwards conveyed Napoleon to St. Helena.

Baltimore seemed irretrievably doomed. In its defense it could only marshal a "home guard," principally consisting of boys and old men of Baltimore, a few country companies of militia, hastily recruited from surrounding Maryland towns and from York and Hanover in Pennsylvania, and about one thousand real soldiers spared to the defense of the city, in all about ten thousand men, under the command of Gen. Samuel Smith, a Revolutionary veteran, and General Strickler, the former as commander-in-chief of the defense of the city and the latter an active head of the defensive operations.

To aid in these operations of defense was Fort M'Henry, at the mouth of the Patuxent river, just outside of the city, by no means a formidable fortress. It was not bomb-proof, and its armament, even for that day, was woefully inadequate. On the opposite side of the river earthworks had been hastily thrown up under the direction of General Smith, and behind these were mounted 100 small cannon. This was at a place then known as "Hamstead Hill," and it still bears that name, although it is included in what is now Patterson park, one of Baltimore's pleasure grounds. Guns were also posted at North Point, some distance away, and at Lazaretto Point, directly opposite Fort M'Henry.

To the hurried erecting of these fortifications practically the entire population of Baltimore—men, women and children—devoted itself as soon as it was learned that the British purposed an attack upon the city.

On September 11 the dread news that the enemy's fleet was off the harbor was made known. This fleet consisted of 50 ships, an extremely powerful armada for that day, carrying 9,000 veteran troops.

Troops were landed from the fleet on Monday, September 12, and on that day began the first fight, known as "the battle of North Point." For the number of men engaged, it was an exceedingly sanguinary affair. It began by an untoward happening to the British and ended with the Americans in possession of the field, after a hot fight of doubtful issue.

Riding at the head of his troops, General Ross was the first man to fall. A few American skirmishers posted along the line of march of the British saw their approach. Tradition has it that two young sharpshooters, Daniel Wells and Henry C. McComas, selected General Ross as their target in the hope of halting the British advance, and fired at him with unerring aim. These two boys, respectively eighteen and nineteen years old, were secreted in a clump of bushes and immediately after they had mortally wounded the British commander they were killed, as they were certain to be, by a tremendous volley fired into their shelter. A monument to these two lads stands today in Alsditch square, at the junction of Gay, Monument and Alsditch streets. In the city of Baltimore, being one of the several structures of the kind which gave it the name of the "Monumental city."

But this disaster only meant a temporary check to the British. Under the direction of Admiral Cockburn and Colonel Brooke, they continued to advance, and in the early afternoon began the real battle of North Point. The Americans were short of ammunition, but determinedly poured a fire of shot, slugs, old nails and scrap iron into their foes. Fearful execution was done during the hour and a half of this fight's duration, after which General Strickler fell back in good order to his base, near Hamstead Hill. The American loss was 150 killed and the British 600.

A heavy rainstorm halted further fighting for the day, and at night, leaving their campfires burning, the British withdrew to the cover of their ships, defeated in their attempt to carry the defending works, and trusting to their fleet to reduce Fort M'Henry and thus give them an easier entrance into the city.

And in the meantime what of the fort? During the day of the battle of North Point it was idle, its defenders, under the intrepid Major George Armistead, awaiting the inevitable attack. It came the next morning.

In order to prevent the passage of the British fleet into the mouth of the river and thus render it able directly to bombard Baltimore, a line of

bulks was sunk across the river. This acted as an effectual barrier and the bombardment of the ships was from off the mouth of the stream.

The British ships had better offensive weapons than the fort. Their cannon carried farther and sent a veritable rain of bombs and shot into the fort all that day and the following night.

Major Armistead at first replied stoutly, but he found that his cannon had not sufficient range to reach the enemy's ships. Wisely, then, he held his fire and awaited events. As a hostile vessel essayed to creep closer to the fort the defenders' fire drove it off. One ship was quickly disabled and was towed out of range by smaller boats. The fort, although suffering little damage, was stoutly holding its own.

Admiral Cockburn, in charge of the fleet, determined upon an assault, and to this end sent a storming party of 1,260 picked men in small boats to essay the ramparts of the fort. The intense darkness of the night aided this project, but as the party was about to land it was discovered. A terrible fire came from the fort, and although the British behaved with great valor, they were beaten off, two of their vessels were sunk and many men were killed.

This storming attempt was not repeated, although the bombardment continued, not ceasing until seven o'clock in the morning of the fourteenth, after a night of fire and terror in which 1,800 shells were thrown into the fort by its assailants. But the attack was frustrated, and, daunted by their heavy losses, the stern resistance they had encountered and the death of their general, the British drew off and the fleet, with the army aboard, sailed away.

It was a great victory, more important than it would have been from its direct effect, for it heartened Americans cast down by a succession of land defeats.

Still greater, however, was this victory, for its horrors were the birth pangs of a song which has since stirred Americans for a hundred years. During the bombardment of Fort Mc-

Mrs. Mary Patteragill, Who Made the Flag.

Henry, Francis Scott Key, lawyer-soldier-poet, wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner," actually, if not officially, the national anthem.

After the fight at Bladensburg, the British fleet had made its way down the Potomac river and up Chesapeake bay. Landings of troops were frequent and these often burned homes on the countryside. During one of these forays an aged physician, Dr. William Beanes of Upper Marlborough, Maryland, had arrested some British soldiers for wanton destruction of his property. He was captured and held a prisoner upon the prison ship Minden.

Doctor Beanes was a close friend of the Key family, and to effect his release Francis Scott Key, under a flag of truce, made his way to the British admiral. He was courteously received and accomplished his purpose, but neither he nor Doctor Beanes was allowed to land immediately, because just at this time the bombardment of Fort M'Henry had been resolved upon and it was feared that they might reveal the British plans.

During the terrible night of September 13, in all the horrors of the bombardment, Key and Doctor Beanes paced the deck of the Minden, fearful at every lull in the firing that the brave little fort had fallen. The fact that the fort's guns could not carry to the hostile ships and therefore early ceased firing until the ships came within range, lent apparent corroboration to their fears.

Morning broke, a fair, bright September morning, and in the soft haze the blushing sun revealed the great flag which had been especially made for the fortress by Mrs. Mary Patteragill of Baltimore in her home at 60 Alsditch street, in a house which still stands. Key's joy was boundless. The words of the first stanza of his glorious song of freedom formed themselves in his mind. He and his companions were released a few hours afterward, and in a small boat, on their way to Baltimore, the song was written.

It was found to fit perfectly to a then popular English tune, "Anacreon in Heaven." The poem was finished that night—September 14, 1814. The next morning it was printed, and that evening, September 15, it was sung with rejoicing in all the taverns and public places in Baltimore, for by that time the British fleet had sailed away and the city was safe.

The city of Baltimore, which was saved from an enemy a century ago, near which Francis Scott Key was born in 1779, and where he died in 1843, honored by a nation, has devoted a week to celebration of its deliverance which culminated September 14, a hundred years from the day of the birth of the national anthem and of the sailing away, defeated, of the menacing fleet of the invader.

IN DEEPEST WATER

Secrets of the Sea Are Revealed
In Dredges.

Explorations of the "Ocean's Floor" Made—Strange Fish Brought to the Surface Succumb at Once to Changed Pressure.

We hear much of land exploration, of expeditions leaving day by day to place man's record in some unknown part of the world, but little is told of the exploration of the ocean bottom where the vast plains and mountain chains covered miles deep with water are being mapped and charted and are yielding to the upper world the strangest creatures of nature. Yet this work is being carried on in almost every sea of the globe, quietly and persistently, although almost unknown except to the scientific world and "those who go down to the sea in ships," says Popular Mechanics.

For years America's place in these important operations has been held by the Albatross, an iron, twin screw steamer of 1,000 tons' displacement, built for the United States fish commission in 1883 and fitted with apparatus for marine work of every description. Its equipment includes machines for ascertaining the depth of the water and character of the bottom, dredges for obtaining fish and other animals from the greatest depths, apparatus for shallow water investigations and a complete laboratory, where specimens may be identified and packed, and scientific studies carried on.

The most important work which the Albatross has done, and that for which it is best equipped, is deep sea sounding and dredging. It is by means of soundings patiently taken one by one that almost every important submerged mountain chain and peak has been plotted and that we know the materials which cover the ocean floor. In the great depths the water is just above the freezing point, no matter what its temperature at the surface. When the Albatross, was in the Dutch East Indies and we were working in a temperature of 110 degrees Fahrenheit, the men who sorted out the specimens in the bottom of the dredge net were dressed in the thinnest of gauze undershirts, but wore long mittens to protect their hands and arms from the ice cold mud. This was a great comfort, too, in that blistering heat, for a cool drink could be obtained in a very few minutes by burying a bottle in the mud, no matter how hot the sun which was blazing down upon us.

By means of a register the number of feet of wire which has run out before bottom is found is indicated, and this is reported to the officer in charge. Thus at every sounding the depth of the water, its temperature and specific gravity at the bottom is compared with that at the surface, and the character of the ocean floor are learned, and the chart prepared accordingly. The deepest sounding which has yet been made by any ship was in the Pacific ocean between the Hawaiian islands and Japan and showed a depth of six and one-half miles.

There are two styles of dredges by means of which the animals and fish of the great depths are captured—the nets which are dragged over the bottom and those trawled just below the surface. The bottom dredge consists of a pair of heavy iron running frames connected by one or two crossbars, twelve feet in length. Fastened to this frame is a cone-shaped bag 30 feet long, made of heavy web, the end of which is closed by a flapping. The dredge is hung over the starboard side of the ship on a long boom and by means of a steel cable is slowly lowered to the ocean bottom. A dial indicates the number of feet of wire out, and a pointer on a scale shows the strain, which often amounts to five or six tons, upon the cable.

As soon as the dredge has reached the bottom the ship steams ahead at about two-thirds of a mile an hour, dragging the net over the ocean floor. It remains down for an hour or so, and is then slowly lifted to the surface. The deepest haul which the Albatross has ever made was five and one-half miles, and it was 17 hours from the time the dredge was first lowered until it again appeared. The net is towed beside the ship for a few minutes, then it is swung on board, the lashings at the bottom unfastened and the contents dropped upon a table. The ice cold mud is carefully washed away and the specimens carried to the laboratory.

It is like opening a Christmas package for a naturalist to watch the dredge come to the surface bringing unknown treasures from the hidden depths. Strange fish are found which carry incandescent lamps far in front of them to light their way in the inky blackness miles below the surface; others with phosphorescent spots along their sides which must glow like the portholes of a steamer at night; still others with their eyes upon long stalks or with no eyes at all. And, poor things, when released from the terrible pressure to which they have become accustomed, their eyes often pop out of their heads and their stomachs turn inside out.

HELPFUL WORDS

From a Hopkinsville Citizen.
Is your back lame and painful?
Does it ache especially after exertion?
Is there a soreness in the kidney region?

These symptoms suggest weak kidneys. If so there is danger in delay. Weak kidneys get fast weaker. Give your trouble prompt attention.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys. Your neighbors use and recommend them.

Read this Hopkinsville testimony. J. H. Hayes, N. Clay st., Hopkinsville, Ky., says: "I had kidney trouble which caused my back to ache. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, got a box and used them as directed. They soon cured me. It gives me pleasure to recommend this fine remedy."

Mr. Hayes is only one of many Hopkinsville people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—If your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Hayes had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c at all stores. ## VETCH IS IMPORTANT CROP

Its More General Growth Would Aid Materially in Live Stock Industry—Also Improves Soil.

(By A. SMITH)

Vetch should occupy an important place in the agriculture of those states where it can be raised with success. In four years' comparisons on over 800 fields, vetch has consistently made heavier growths and greater yields than crimson clover, red clover, or bur clover, although under favorable conditions these have done well.

Vetch is high in protein content, is a good hay, pasture, and soiling crop, and its more general growth would aid in the development of the live stock industry and remove much of the existing necessity for buying hay. Vetch is used as a cover crop to prevent the leaching and washing of soils. Like all legumes, it improves land by adding nitrogen and organic matter to the soils. As it grows through the winter and spring and may be harvested in time to plant corn or cowpeas on the same land, it should be used in building up impoverished soils and in maintaining the productivity of the land. The vetch crop does not require horse or man labor at any time when this is needed for the cowpea crop, except possibly at the harvest time of cowpea hay.

RETURNS FROM WORK HORSES

Many Little Points Are Enumerated That Will Lessen Cost of Animal Labor on the Farm.

(By A. H. BENTON, Assistant Agriculturist, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.)

One of the most frequent sources of loss on the farm is insufficient return from work horses.

Have you satisfied yourself on the following points?

Do your horses earn enough to pay for their feed and care, and enough to meet the interest, depreciation and other expenses, as harness costs and shoeing?

It costs $100 annually to keep the average horse, in Minnesota, but this horse works only a little more than three hours each working day. This makes the horse labor cost approximately ten cents an hour.

Do you handle the horse labor on your farm so that the annual cost of keeping your horse is less than the average, or so that the number of hours worked is greater? Both methods will reduce the cost of the horse labor, but the latter offers by far the greatest opportunity.

Can you revise your cropping system so that fewer work horses will be needed, or so that the work will be more equally distributed and thus make it possible to employ them more hours each year?

Can you raise colts and thus reduce the cost of keeping your horses?

Can you arrange to use your work horses for outside work when not busy on the farm?

Can you reduce the cost of keeping each horse by feeding less feed or cheaper feed and still give a proper ration?

Farm work done with fewer horses means a saving of $100 a year for each horse not needed.

Humus Needed.

The amount of water a soil will hold against gravity depends upon the type of soil. A clay soil composed of fine particles with very small spaces will retain more water than a coarser, sandier soil composed of larger particles and larger spaces. Also, the amount of humus, or decomposed organic matter, in the soil influences the water holding capacity. The more humus in the soil, the more water it will hold, providing the soil particles are of similar size.

Alfalfa Causes Scours.

Alfalfa fed too liberally to very young calves will cause scours. It is very rich feed and the amount given must be limited, especially when the calf is young and before it has a chance to adjust itself to alfalfa hay. In short, whenever there is a change made in the feeding of animals it should be done gradually or there is danger of digestive troubles.

Waste of Food.

Food is wasted when the animal is exposed to excessive cold; when it is deprived of sufficient water; when it is compelled to drink ice cold water; when it is worried, driven about.

Mulch the Celery.

Do not delay applying the manure mulch to the celery. It conserves moisture better than any kind or amount of tillage. Use three to four

M'PHERSON HOME BURNED

Caught Over The Kitchen Shortly After Two O'clock Sunday Afternoon.

HAD BUT LITTLE INSURANCE.

Was One of The Ante-Bellum Mansions of Early Hopkinsville.

The handsome home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. McPherson, 203 W. Fifteenth street, was almost entirely destroyed by fire at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The fire originated in the ell room and the building burned rapidly, but prompt work of the fire department put out the flames in time to leave the main walls standing. The roof is burned off and the house completely gutted, with but little left that can be utilized in rebuilding. Neighbors rallied quickly and much of the contents was saved. Mrs. McPherson was away on a visit to relatives in Bowling Green, but returned Sunday night.

The loss is heavy, probably amounting to $3,000 or $4,000. The insurance was only $1,000 on the house and $200 on the contents.

The house was one of the old-time, ante-bellum mansions of the town, though it had been improved and remodeled by Mr. McPherson. During the war it was occupied by the family of the late Gano Henry and was a center of gaiety in the society of that period. Later it was bought by the late Judge Jno. W. McPherson and was the childhood home of the present owner.

Mr. McPherson will rebuild as soon as possible.

Tobacco Crop Destroyed.

The crop of tobacco belonging to J. West, who resides on the Ben Myers farm, near Crofton, was destroyed by fire a few days ago. The process of curing the weed had been in progress only about two days. When the fire was discovered a fire extinguisher was brought into use and the building was saved, but nearly all of the tobacco was consumed. The loss is about $400.

Barn and Contents Burned.

A barn filled with tobacco belonging to Carl Nixon, on Wm. Ferrell's farm, near Mt. Zoar church, burned last Friday night. The building caught while the tobacco was being cured. It is not known what the loss amounted to.

Lightning's Work.

At Trenton Friday, lightning destroyed a barn on the farm of J. C. Brown, in the edge of town, burning it with its contents. The barn contained seed wheat, farming implements, lumber and hay. The loss is estimated at $1,200, with only $125 insurance.

F. D. HANCOCK'S WILL

Probated in County Court Yesterday.

The will of the late Frank D. Hancock was probated in County Court yesterday. He bequeathed to his wife, Laura Allen Hancock, all of his possessions, to have and to hold as long as she lives or remains his widow. At her death or should she marry again, everything is to be sold and the proceeds, after erecting suitable monuments, are to be divided equally among his children. A small bequest is also made to his grandson, James E. Hancock, Jr. The will was written June 13 1914.

INDICTMENT DISMISSED

By Marriage at The Courthouse Yesterday Afternoon.

Richard Ladd and Miss Lillie Newton, a young couple from South Christian, were married by Judge Knight yesterday afternoon, at the courthouse. The ceremony stopped a prosecution against young Ladd in circuit court, and he seemed much relieved when the young lady had become his wife. She was accompanied by her father and carried her infant in her arms. The bride gave her age as 17 years and was quite pretty.

VICK'S Croup and SALVE

To Make a Barrel Filter. A fine, unsifted cork must be used for making a filter. Other necessities are a piece of fine brass wire cloth and a coarser wire cloth, each of a size sufficient to make a partition across the barrel. The coarser wire cloth is placed under the brass wire cloth to support it, and under both light cross frame of oak, to keep the wire from sagging. These are placed about three-quarters down the barrel and securely fastened in position. Then fill in upon the wire cloth about three inches in depth of clear, sharp sand then two inches of finely-broken charcoal without any dust. Then on the charcoal place four inches of clear, sharp sand. Fill up the barrel with water, and draw from the foot, where a faucet has been inserted.

ABRAHAM L. FREEDMAN

Died Sunday and Burial Will Be In Evansville Today.

Mr. Abraham L. Freedman died Sunday at 6:30 p. m., at his home, 612 South Campbell street, in the 29th year of his age. He had been in poor health for several months and had recently returned from the west after a vain search for health. Mr. Freedman came here several years ago and has been engaged in the meat business with his brother. He was married to Miss Jessie Tanner, shortly after coming to Hopkinsville, and his young widow and two small children survive him.

The body will be taken to Evansville, his former home, for interment. Services conducted according to Jewish rites will be followed by the ritualistic burial service of the Odd Fellows, of which the deceased was a member. He was also a member of the local lodge Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Freedman had made many friends during his residence here, who appreciated his good qualities as a citizen and a business man and who deeply regret his untimely taking-off.

Bramham-Furlong.

Mr. James Goss Bramham, youngest son of the late Prof. J. G. Bramham, and a Hopkinsville boy now living in Minnesota, was married Oct. 6 to Miss Loretta Dorothy Furlong, at Austin, Minn. The wedding was a brilliant church affair, the bride being attended by her sister as matron of honor and four bridesmaids. A wedding breakfast was served to forty guests at the home of the bride's father, Hon. J. J. Furlong. The Austin Herald says of the young couple: "The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. Furlong and she has lived in Austin and vicinity all her life. She graduated from our High School in the class of 1907, and has since devoted her time to her father's household. She is lovable and charming, as well as competent and helpful. Her wedding day brought to her the good wishes of the entire city for all who know her, are her friends."

The groom has been for the past eleven years with the Hornell Packing Co., and at the present is sales manager of that company. He is a splendid type of manhood, embodying those traits which call forth the respect of his business associates and those which make him trusted and sought by friends and acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. Bramham will enjoy a wedding trip to the groom's old home in Kentucky, where they will be guests of Mr. Bramham's mother, after which they will return to Austin and be at home after December first at 811 Lansing Avenue."

HUNG JURY

In Trial of Jeff McCarn, Formerly of Nashville.

The jury in the trial of Jeff McCarn, United States district attorney for Hawaii, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, disagreed at Honolulu, Saturday, and was discharged. The vote stood 6 to 6. McCarn was accused by Claudius McBride, an attorney, with having attacked him May 5 in an altercation arising from a law suit. In his defense McCarn contended that McBride struck him in the face, while his hands were held behind him by another man. At one stage of the altercation McCarn maintained that McBride placed his right hand in his hip pocket. There was a tussle and McCarn admitted that while down he endeavored to draw a revolver.

McCarn was indicted by both the territorial and the United States grand juries. The federal indictment, however, was dismissed, it being held that the government was without jurisdiction in the case.

The Tables Turned.

It was pay day at the Consolidated Coal & Lumber works, and a mine worker was returning home with his monthly envelope. He met a bad man with a pistol, who demanded his wages. The worker handed the money over. "Now," said he, "my wife will think that I've gambled or drunk; won't you shoot a hole in my coat, so that I can prove I was attacked and robbed?" "Why, certainly so," answered the robber. The worker held out his coat tail while the other punctured it with a bullet. "Another," begged the worker, and the other fired again. "Another," and there was another hole in the garment—another, and still another. "That's all the cartridges I've got," said the robber. "All the money you've got," said the miner, with a ferocious look. "Give back that money, hand over your pistol, and whatever else you happen to have."

The Cocktail.

Who invented the cocktail? Some bartender? A bon vivant? Or was its discovery the result of a drunken frolic?

The cocktail was invented by Mrs. Elizabeth Flanagan, widow of an Irish soldier who fell in the service of the American army during the Revolution. After her husband's death, Mrs. Flanagan became an army sutler, following a troop of Virginia horse under Colonel Burr. In the winter of 1779 she took up quarters with the troop in a place called Four Corners, on the road between Tarrytown and White Plains, N. Y.—near the demesne of John D. Rockefeller. There Mrs. Flanagan set up a hotel which soon became the rendezvous of the "swells" of that day. One day the hostess surprised her guests by announcing a new drink—the cocktail—supposed to have been named after the blending of colors in the tail of a game cock.—Philadelphia Evening Ledger.
